Running the shop

Everything in the admin panel, in order: adding a saree, what the shopper then sees, and dealing with an order from the moment it arrives to the moment it is delivered.

What this book leaves out

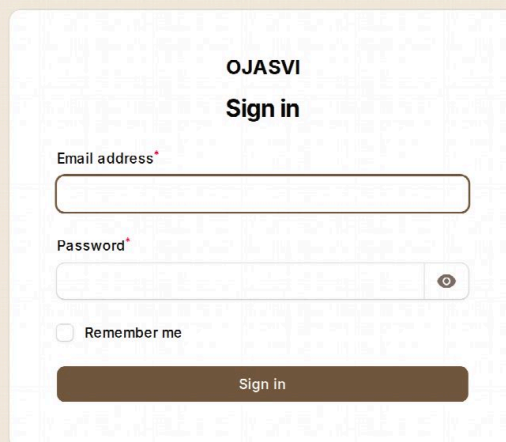

Anything to do with the server, the email settings, where the photographs are stored, the payment keys and the analytics accounts is set up and looked after by me. You will see a few tabs in Settings that are not described here — Email, Photograph storage, Analytics, Found on Google. Leave those alone; if something there needs changing, send me a message and I will do it.

I · Signing in, and the shape of the screen

The admin panel is a separate address from the shop. The shop is what customers see; the admin is where you work.

Address: ojasvidrapes.in/admin

- 1 Open ojasvidrapes.in/admin in any browser. On a phone it works too, though adding a saree is easier on a laptop or an iPad.
- 2 Type the email address and password I gave you, and press Sign in.
- 3 Tick Remember me on your own computer so you are not asked every morning. Do not tick it on a shared one.

The sign-in screen. If you forget the password, I can set a new one for you in a minute — there is no "forgot password" email on this shop by design.

The sidebar

Everything is in the list down the left, in four groups. The number in a pill beside an item is work waiting for you — two orders to deal with, two reviews to look at.

Group	What lives there
Catalogue	Sarees — every piece you sell. Collections — the groups a shopper can browse by (Bridal, Everyday...). Fabric & weave — the words used in the specification table and the filters.
Selling	Orders — everything that has been bought. Offers — automatic discounts, no code needed. Coupons — codes a shopper types at checkout.
Storefront	Front page — the rows on the home page. Films — the short videos. Pages — Our story, Contact, the policies. Reviews — what customers wrote.
Shop	Messages — the contact form. Customers — people with an account. Delivery areas — pincodes and charges. Mailing list . Settings .

Three things that are true everywhere

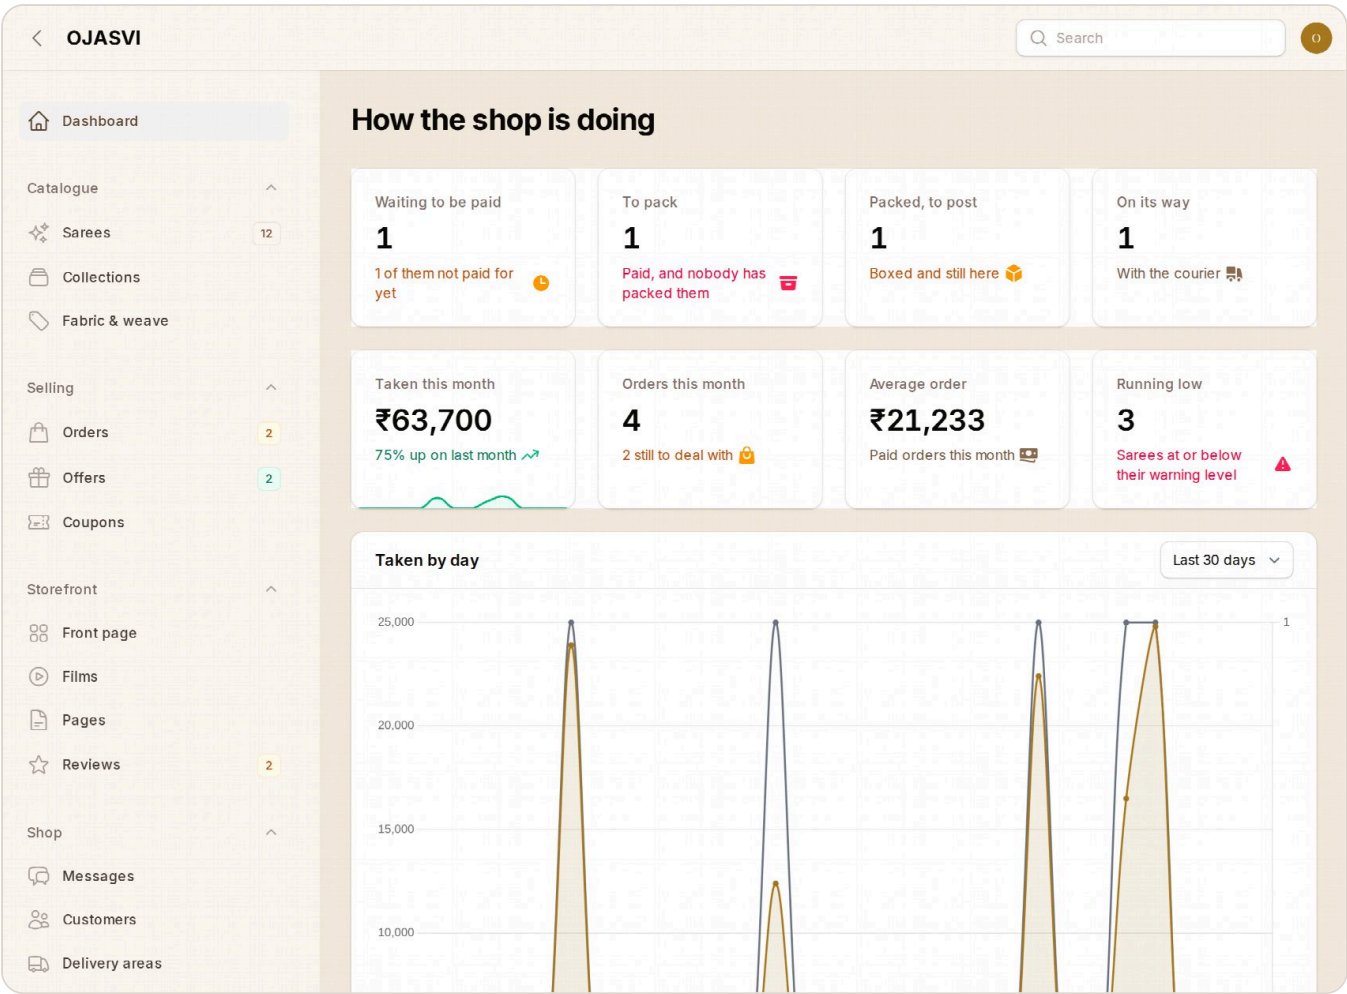

A red asterisk beside a label means the field must be filled in before the page will save. Nothing you type is live until you press Save changes (or Create on a new one). Grey writing under a box is a hint about that box — it is worth reading the first time.

Signing out

Press the round initial at the top right of any screen and choose Sign out. On a shared computer, do this when you finish.

2 · The front page: how the shop is doing

This is what opens when you sign in. It is built to answer one question before your tea goes cold: is there anything the shop needs me to do right now?

The eight tiles. The top row is work; the bottom row is money.

Tile	What it means
Waiting to be paid	Somebody started an order and the payment never came through. Nothing to pack. These cancel themselves after a while.
To pack	Paid for, and nobody has packed them. This is the number that matters. If it is not zero, start here.
Packed, to post	Boxed and still in the shop. Waiting for the courier.
On its way	With the courier, not yet delivered.
Taken this month	Money actually received this month, and how that compares with last month.
Orders this month	How many, and how many still need you.
Average order	What a typical paid order is worth this month.

Running low

Sarees at or below the warning level you set on each piece.

Every tile is a link. Press To pack and you land on exactly those orders, already filtered. Below the tiles are a chart of what came in by day, the orders needing attention, the sarees running low, and — if the shop's Google and Meta accounts are connected — how the advertising is doing.

3 · Adding a saree, step by step

A saree is added once and lives in five tabs. Fill them left to right; you can come back to any of them later.

Catalogue → Sarees → the New saree button, top right

The piece Photographs Colourways Price & stock Goes with Listing & search

Name*

Web address*

Design code

Status*

Shown to shoppers as "Design OD-1200", and how you will look it up.

Draft — nobody can see it

Description

One or two lines

The full story

1 the name 2 the status. The web address fills itself in from the name.

Field	What to put in it
Name	What a shopper will call it: "Kanjivaram in deep indigo". This is the heading on its page and the name on its card.
Web address	Fills itself in as you type the name. Leave it alone. Changing it later breaks every link anybody has shared.
Design code	Your own code — OD-1200. Shown to shoppers as "Design OD-1200", and it is how you will find the piece again. Worth using.
Status	Draft — nobody can see it; use this while you are working. Published — on sale. Archived — hidden, but old orders keep working.
One or two lines	The short description, under the name on the saree's page and in the big rows on the home page. One sentence about the weave.
The full story	The long description: weave, zari, border, blouse piece, care. This is what a shopper reads before deciding.

Categories	Which collections it belongs to — Bridal, Everyday. A saree can be in several, or none.
Fabric, weave, occasion	The words in the specification table, and what shoppers filter the listing by. Pick as many as apply.

Leave the status on Draft while you work

A new saree starts as a draft. Change it to Published on the last pass, once the photographs and the price are right. Nothing is on the shop until you do.

Tab 2 — Photographs

Two things are asked for here, and they do different jobs. Section 4 explains them in full; in short:

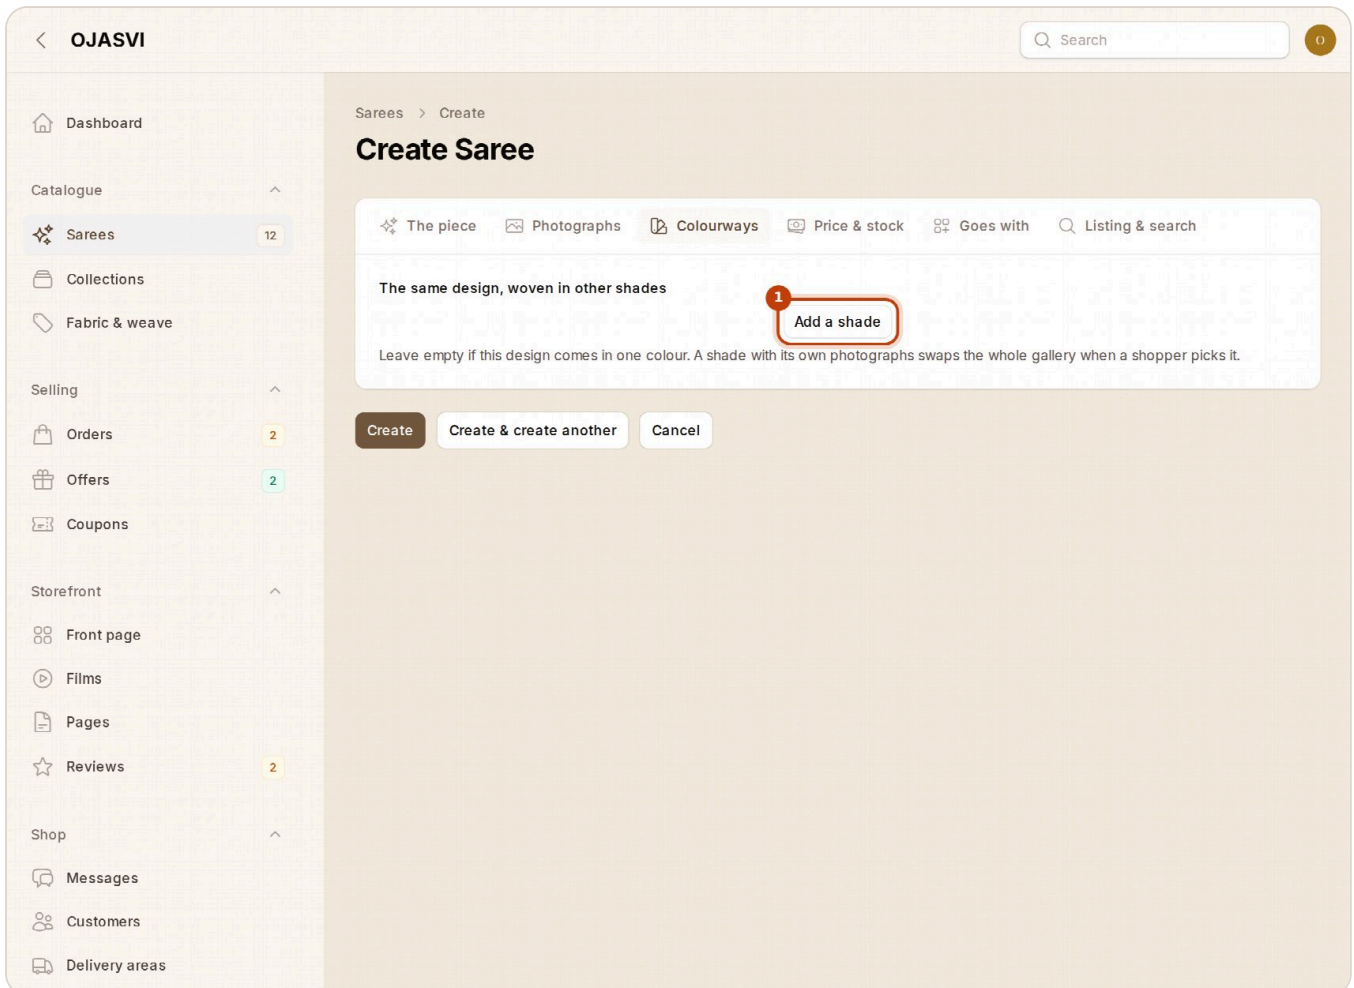

1 The saree worn — one picture of this saree on somebody. It opens the saree's own page. 2 Pictures of this saree — the flat shots. These are what the front page and the cards show.

- Press Browse, or drag a photograph onto the box.
- Photographs straight off the camera are fine. They are made smaller on the way in, at a quality nobody can tell apart, so the shop loads quickly on a phone.
- The pencil on a photograph opens the cropper. Crop, then Save inside that window.

- Describe it is one short line saying what the picture shows. It is read aloud to shoppers who cannot see, and Google reads it too.
- Drag the handle at the left of a row to reorder. The first picture is the one on the card.

Tab 3 — Colourways

Only if the same design is woven in more than one colour. Leave it empty otherwise. Section 5 covers it.

- 1 Add a shade. Each shade can have its own code, price, stock and photographs.

The quickest way to add a second saree in the same weave

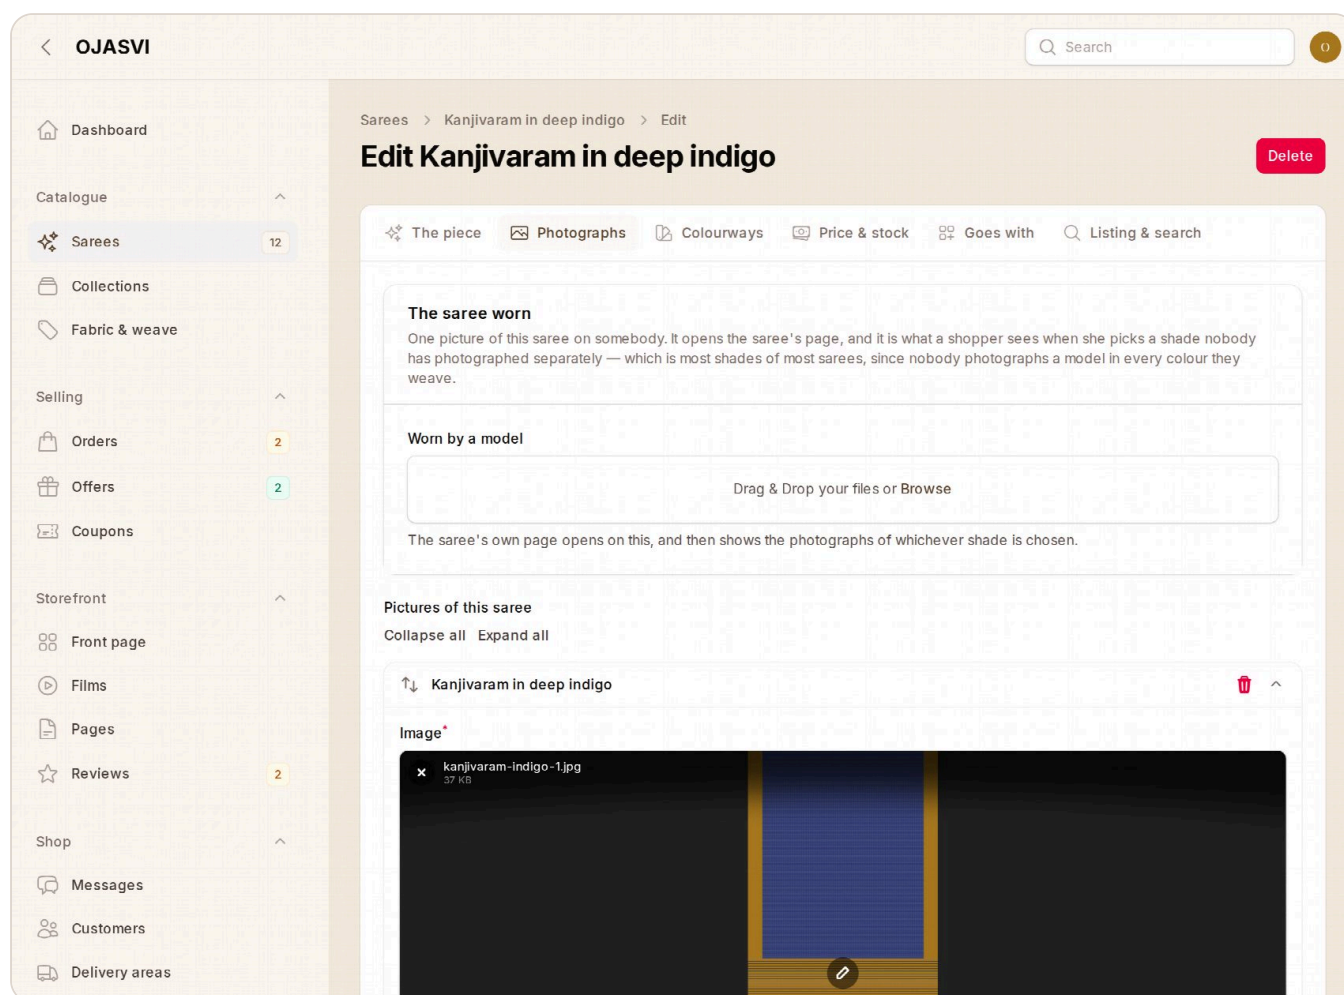

Find the first one in the list and press Duplicate. Everything is copied except the name and the web address; change those, change the photographs, and you are done.

4 · Photographs: the three kinds

A saree can carry three sorts of photograph, and each is shown somewhere different.

Getting this right is most of what makes the shop look considered.

Where you add it	Where the shopper sees it
The saree worn Photographs tab, at the top	Opens the saree's own page. Also the only picture shown for a shade nobody has photographed separately.
Pictures of this saree Photographs tab, below	The card in the listing, the rows on the home page, search results, and what is shared on WhatsApp.
Photographs of this shade Colourways tab, inside a shade	The saree's page when that shade is chosen.

A saree with both filled in. "The saree worn" sits in its own box at the top; the flat shots are underneath, in the order they will appear.

Why the saree's page does not show the flat shots

A shopper presses a photograph on the home page and lands on the saree's page. If that page opened with the very same picture, the press would feel like nothing happened. So the page shows her something new: the saree worn, and then the shade she is looking at. The flat shots have already done their job.

What the gallery shows, exactly

The situation	The gallery on the saree's page
Shade has its own photographs	Those photographs, then the saree worn at the end
Shade has none of its own	Just the saree worn
Shade has none, and "Show the saree worn" is off for it	Falls back to the pictures of the saree — a page is never left blank
Saree has no shades at all	The saree worn, then its own pictures if there is no worn picture

How many photographs?

One worn picture, three or four flat shots, and one or two per shade is plenty. Shoot the fall of the drape, the pallu, the border and the blouse piece. A photograph of the weave up close sells more than another full-length shot.

5 · Shades

A shade is the same design woven in another colour. It is not a separate saree: one page, one set of reviews, with buttons at the top to switch between colours.

1 ☐ Show the saree worn with this shade

The picture under "The saree worn" is added at the end of this shade's photographs, and is the only thing shown for a shade with none of its own. Turn it off where it would mislead — a shade in quite another colour from the one in that photograph.

Photographs of this shade

Image*

kanjivaram-indigo-1.jpg 37 KB

1 Show the saree worn with this shade 2 that shade's own photographs.

Field	What it does
Shade	The colour's name — Indigo, Maroon. Shown beside the swatches and printed on the order.
Swatch dot	The little round colour the shopper presses. Pick the closest colour to the cloth.
Design code	If this shade has a code of its own.
Price, if different	Leave empty and the shade costs what the design costs. Fill it only when this colour is genuinely a different price.

Offer price	An offer on this shade alone.
In stock	Leave empty and the shade shares the design's stock. Fill it in and this colour is counted on its own — which is usually what you want.
Show the saree worn with this shade	On by default. Turn it off for a shade that looks nothing like the colour in the worn photograph, so the shopper is not misled.
Photographs of this shade	Pictures of this colour. The first one is what the page opens on when the shade is chosen.

The first shade is the default

A shopper arriving from the home page sees the first shade in the list — its photographs, its price and its stock. Drag the shade you most want to sell to the top.

6 · Price, offer price and stock

Catalogue → Sarees → open a saree → Price & stock

The price

Field	What it does
Price	The usual price. Required.
Offer price	What it sells for now. The shop then shows the offer price in large type, the usual price struck through beside it, and works out the percentage off by itself. Leave it empty when the saree is not on offer.
What it cost you	Your own cost. Never shown to a shopper. It is there so the shop can tell you the margin.
From / Until	Run the offer between two dates — a festival sale that starts and ends by itself. Leave both empty and the offer price simply runs until you remove it.

How the price shows up on the shop

Price ₹18,500 with no offer price → ₹18,500.

Price ₹18,500, offer price ₹15,900 → ₹15,900 ~~₹18,500~~ 14% OFF.

The figures are worked out when the page is drawn, so you never type a percentage anywhere.

Stock

Field	What it does
Count stock	On for a piece you have a fixed number of. Off for something you can always weave again — then it never says sold out.
In stock	How many you have. It goes down by itself when somebody buys, and back up if an order is called off.
Warn me at	When stock reaches this number the saree appears in "Running low" on the front page. Three is a sensible setting.
Allow orders when it runs out	Lets a shopper order at zero. Only for a design you are certain you can get.

Under Parcel you can record the weight and size of the packed saree. It is used when a courier is booked; it is fine to leave it.

Stock lives in two places when a saree has shades

If a shade has its own "In stock" figure, that is the one the shop counts for that colour. Leave the shade's figure empty and every colour shares the design's single number — which means selling the indigo one takes the maroon one down too. For most shops, fill in the shade.

7 · Publishing and featuring

Catalogue → Sarees → open a saree → Listing & search

Field	What it does
Feature it	Gives the saree a full-width editorial row on the home page — a big photograph with the name, the line of description, the price and a button. Four or five featured pieces is about right; twenty is a grid, not a choice.
Publish at	Leave empty and the saree goes live the moment the status says Published. Put a date and time in and it waits until then — useful for a collection you want to open on a Friday morning.
Title / Description (How it reads on Google)	What a Google result shows. Leave both empty and the shop uses the saree's name and its short description, which is usually right.

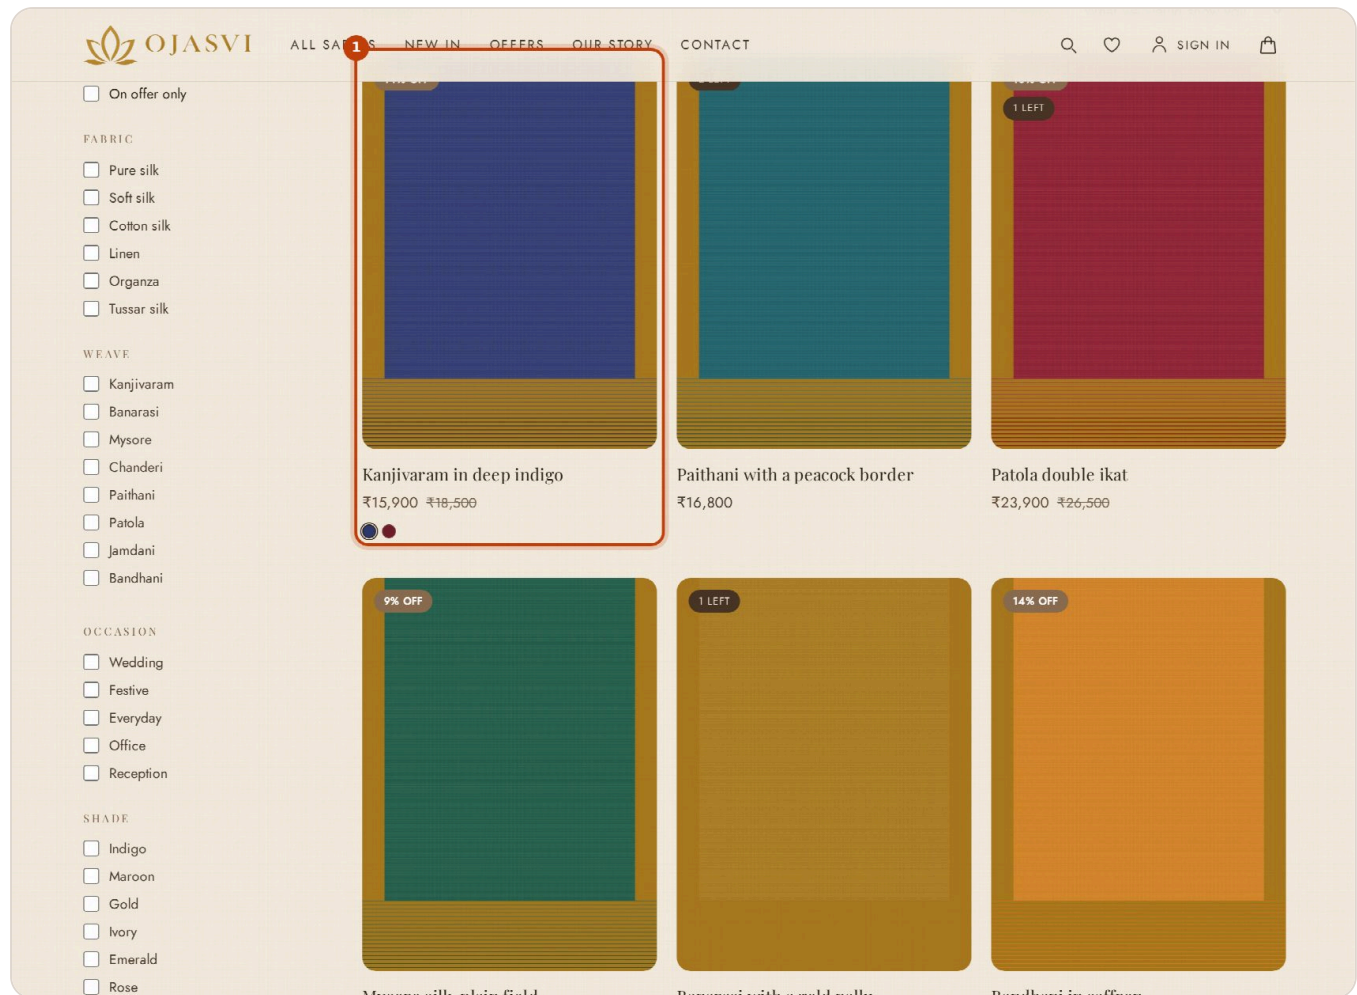

A saree added today goes to the front

New pieces come first in the listing and on the home page, so you do not have to do anything to show what has just arrived. Leave "Publish at" empty and it is live as soon as you press Save.

8 . What the shopper sees

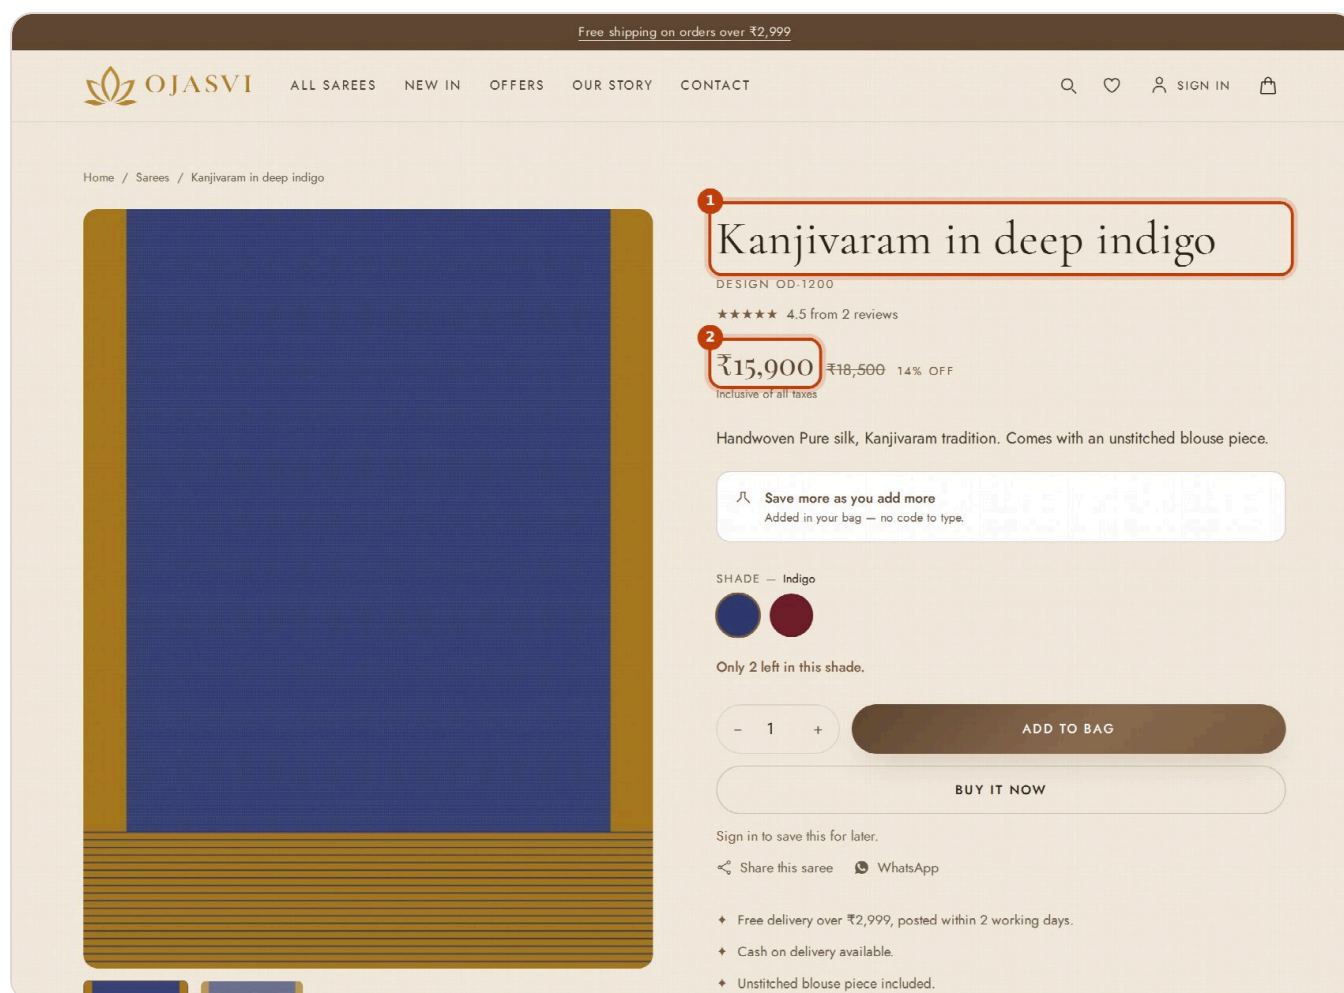

The same saree, as it appears on the shop. Worth reading once so that what you type in the admin has a picture attached to it.

On the listing

1 A card: the first of the pictures of this saree, the name, the price. An offer shows the new price with the old one struck through.

On the saree's own page

1 the name 2 the price, with the usual price struck through and the percentage worked out. The gallery on the left opens on the first shade; the swatches below the price switch between colours, and the price, the stock line and the photographs all change together.

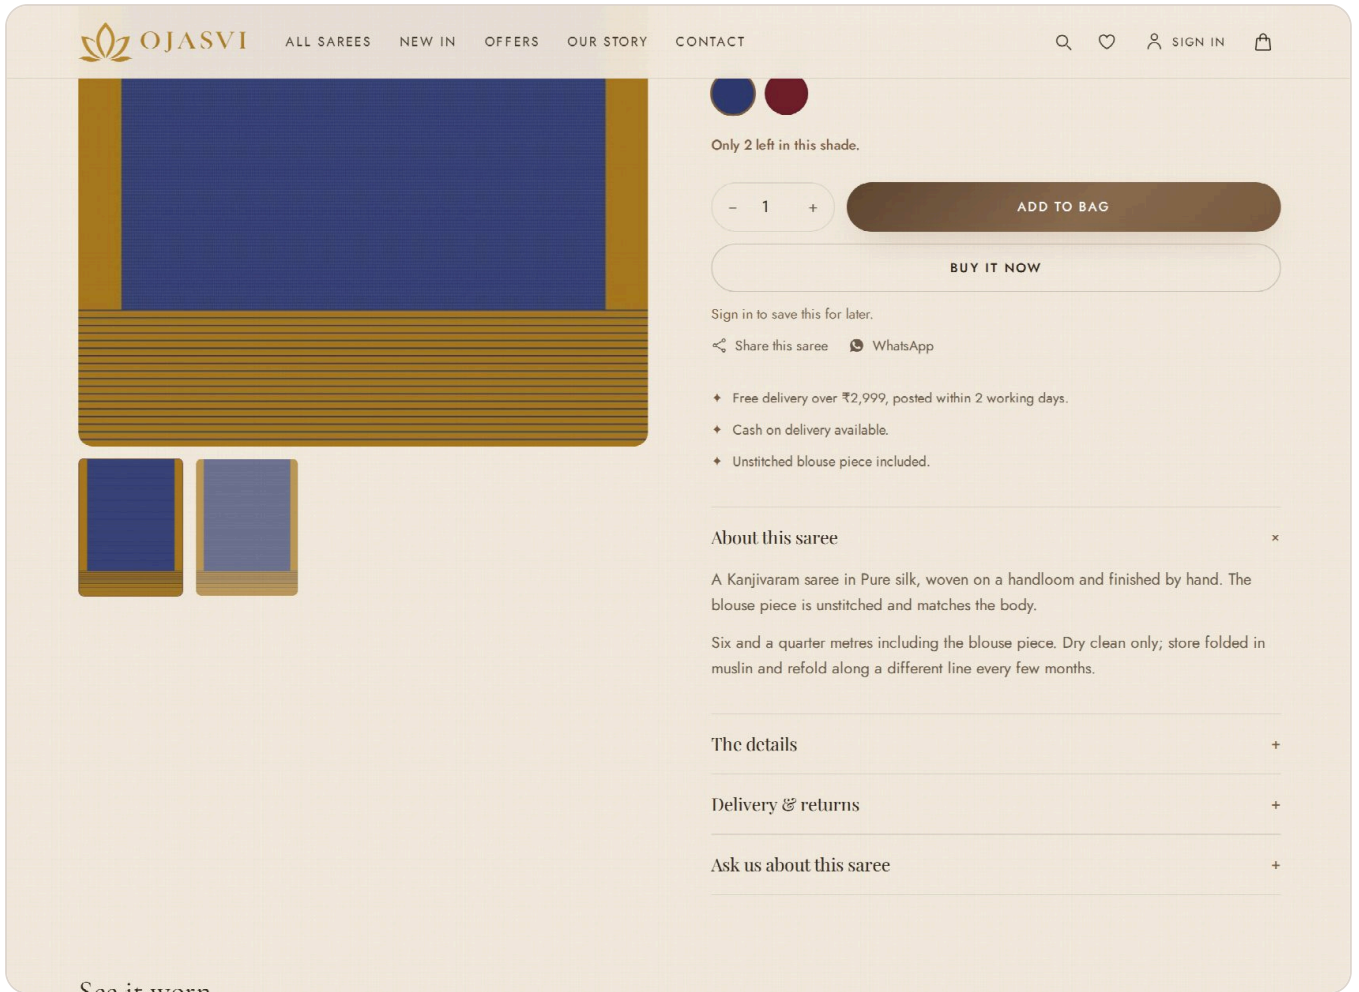

On the page	Where it comes from
Heading	Name
"Design OD-1200"	Design code
The line under the price	One or two lines
The big photograph and the strip of thumbnails	The chosen shade's photographs, then the saree worn
The round colour dots	Each shade's swatch dot and name
"Only 2 left in this shade"	The shade's stock
Free delivery line, days to post	Settings → Delivery & payment
The specification table	Fabric, weave, occasion

Most of your customers are on a phone. The photographs become a swipe rail and the price sits directly under the name.

A featured saree gets a row of its own, made from the pictures of this saree. Pressing it opens the saree's page, which opens on the saree worn.

9 · Orders, from arrival to delivered

An order moves through stages. Each stage has one button that takes it to the next, and pressing that button is also what tells the customer.

Selling → Orders

The piles of work

1 The tabs are piles of work, not filters you have to build: Needs you, To pack, Packed, to post, On its way, Waiting to be paid, Done, All. 2 The buttons at the end of a row do the same things as the buttons on the order itself, so a whole morning's packing can be done from this one screen.

The stages

Stage	What it means
Pending	Placed, not paid for. Cash-on-delivery orders start here too.
Confirmed	Paid for. This is the pile to work from.

Packed	Boxed, waiting for the courier.
Shipped	Gone, with a tracking number.
Delivered	Arrived. For cash on delivery this is also when the money is counted as received.
Cancelled	Called off. The pieces go back into stock.
Refunded	Money given back, in part or in full.

Packing and sending one

- 1 Open To pack on the orders screen, or press the tile on the front page.
- 2 Open the order. Read Pieces — the shade matters as much as the saree — and pack it.
- 3 Press Mark packed if you box in the morning and post in the afternoon. (Several at once: tick the rows and use the bulk action.) Skip it if the parcel goes straight out.
- 4 When the courier takes it, press Mark as sent and fill in the form below.
- 5 When it arrives, press It arrived. For a cash-on-delivery order this is also the moment the shop counts the money as received.

The send form. Carried by the courier, Tracking number what they gave you, Should arrive a date, and Email the customer now — leave that on and the customer gets the tracking number straight away.

The other buttons

Button	When to use it
Book with Delhivery	Shown only when the Delhivery account is connected. Books the parcel and fetches the tracking number for you. If it refuses, use Mark as sent and type the number in by hand — nothing is lost.
Call it off	Cancels the order and puts the pieces back into stock . Write a line saying why; it stays in the history. If it was paid for, refund it separately.
Refund	Gives money back. For an online payment the money really goes back through Razorpay; for cash on delivery it only records what you did by hand. You can refund part of an order — the box will not let you give back more than is left.
Move on	On a row in the list. Moves an order to any stage with a note. For putting right a stage pressed by mistake.

What the customer is told, and when

Moment	What they get
Order placed	A confirmation with what they bought, what they paid and where it is going. You and anybody else listed in Settings get a copy.
Payment goes through	A receipt (not for cash on delivery — that is paid at the door).
You press Mark as sent	The courier and the tracking number, if the toggle is left on.
Parcel is delivered	Nothing automatic. A WhatsApp message is nicer than an email here — the button is on the order.

Do not change an address by hand

If a customer wants the parcel to go somewhere else, write the new address in a message and send it to the courier, or call the order off and take it again. The address on the order is the record of what was agreed.

10 · Offers and coupons

An offer happens by itself when the bag qualifies. A coupon is a code the shopper types. Use offers for a sale, coupons for a person.

Offers

Selling → Offers → New offer

Offers running now. The shop applies the best one the bag qualifies for and writes the saving on the bag and on the order.

II · Delivery areas

What delivery costs, how long it takes and whether cash on delivery is offered — decided by the shopper's pincode.

Shop → Delivery areas

The screenshot shows the OJASVI app interface. On the left is a sidebar menu with categories like Catalogue, Selling, Storefront, Shop, and Messages. The 'Delivery areas' option is highlighted. The main screen displays the 'Delivery Areas' list. At the top right of the main screen is a 'New delivery area' button. The list contains three entries: 'Telangana & Andhra Pradesh', 'North East & islands', and 'Rest of India'. Each entry shows its charge, delivery time, cash on delivery status, and delivery status. There are also 'Edit' and 'Delete' icons for each entry. A search bar and a filter icon are at the top of the list. At the bottom of the list, it says 'Showing 1 to 3 of 3 results' and 'Per page 10'.

Areas are checked in order, top to bottom, and the first one that matches is used.

Field	What it does
Checked in this order	Lower numbers are checked first.
Pincodes starting with	Type a prefix and press enter — "50" covers every pincode beginning 50. Leave it empty and the area matches everywhere.
Delivery charge / Free once the bag reaches	What it costs here, and the figure above which it is free.
Arrives in, at least / at most	The days quoted to the shopper.
Cash on delivery here	Off for areas where you will not send COD.

Delivering here

Off and checkout tells the shopper that pincode cannot be served.

Keep the catch-all area last

An area with no pincodes matches everybody. If it is not at the bottom of the list, nothing below it is ever reached.

Reviews wait for you. Nothing appears on a saree page until Show on the shop is turned on.

Only customers who are signed in can write one. Open a review, read it, and turn Show on the shop on to publish it. Leave an unfair one off rather than deleting it, so you have the record.

Marked as a real purchase is set by the shop itself when the review belongs to a delivered order; do not tick it by hand.

13 · Messages from the contact form

Everything sent through the contact page, oldest unanswered first.

Each message carries the name, the email, the phone number and the order number if they gave one. You are emailed when one arrives. Reply from your own email — pressing Reply answers the customer directly — then mark the message answered here so the next person does not reply twice.

Everybody with an account: what they have spent, how many orders, when they last bought.

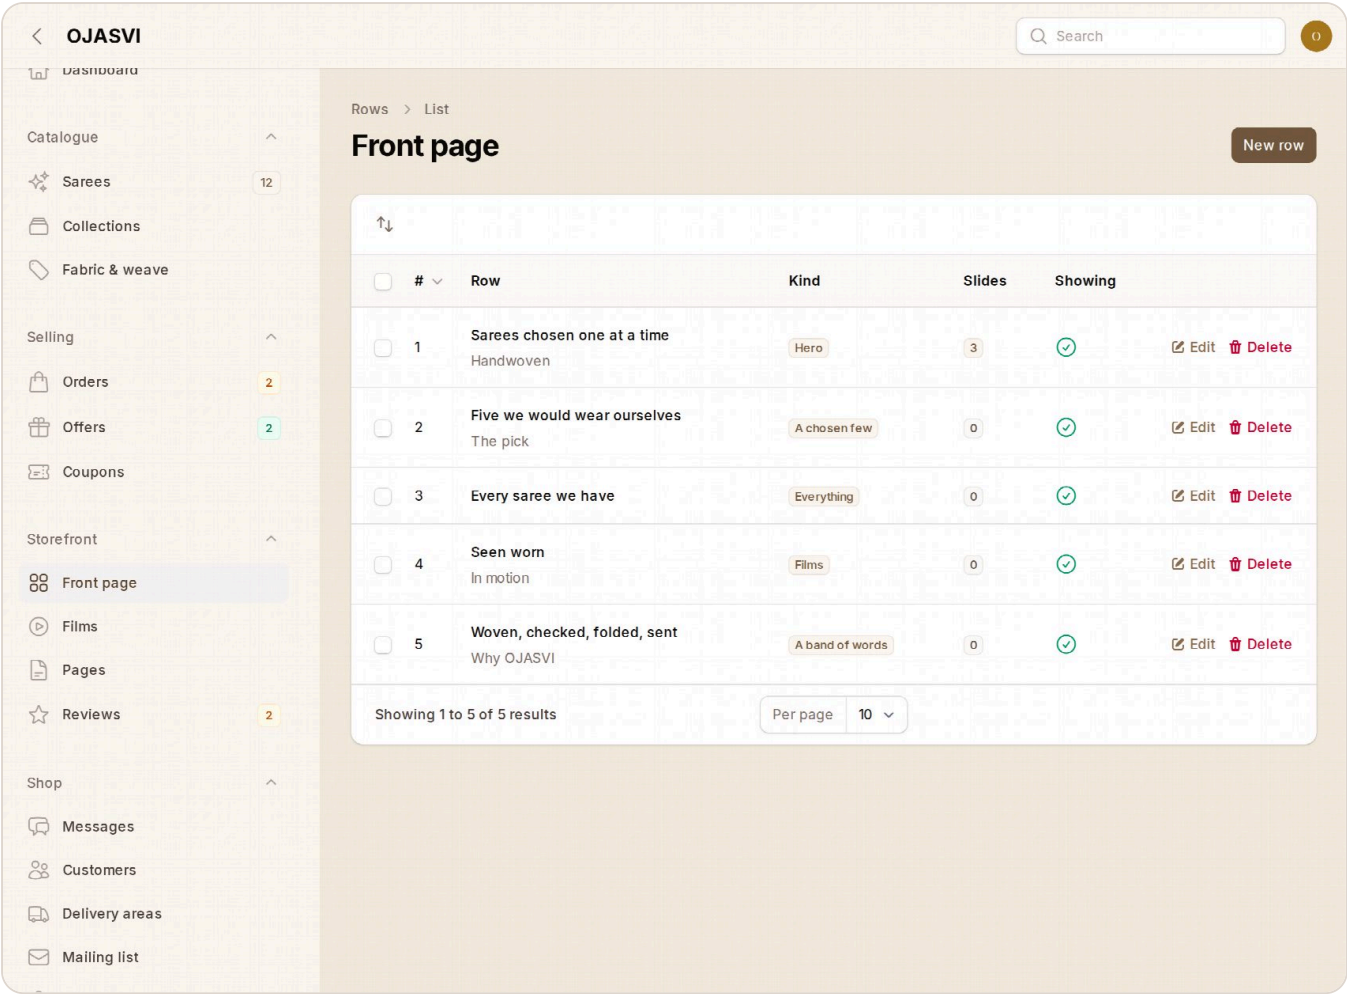

A customer does not need an account to buy. An account lets them keep their addresses, see their past orders and write reviews. You can open one to see their orders in one place — useful on the phone when somebody says "I ordered last Diwali".

Admin accounts

The Admin tick on a person is what lets them into this panel. Do not tick it for a customer.

15 · The front page of the shop

The home page is a list of rows. Drag to reorder them, turn one off with its switch, or open one to change its heading.

Row	What it shows
Hero	The big slides at the very top. Each slide has a photograph, a heading, a line and a button.
Featured	The full-width editorial rows — the sarees with Feature it turned on. The number of them is the row's own setting.
Collection	A grid of cards.
Lookbook	A looser arrangement of photographs.
Band	A strip of words across the page — a promise, an offer.
Reels	The films.

Each row has a heading, a line above it and a line below, and a limit — how many pieces it shows. Change the words here rather than asking me: it is the same box for all of them.

16 · Pages — Our story, Contact, policies

Storefront → Pages

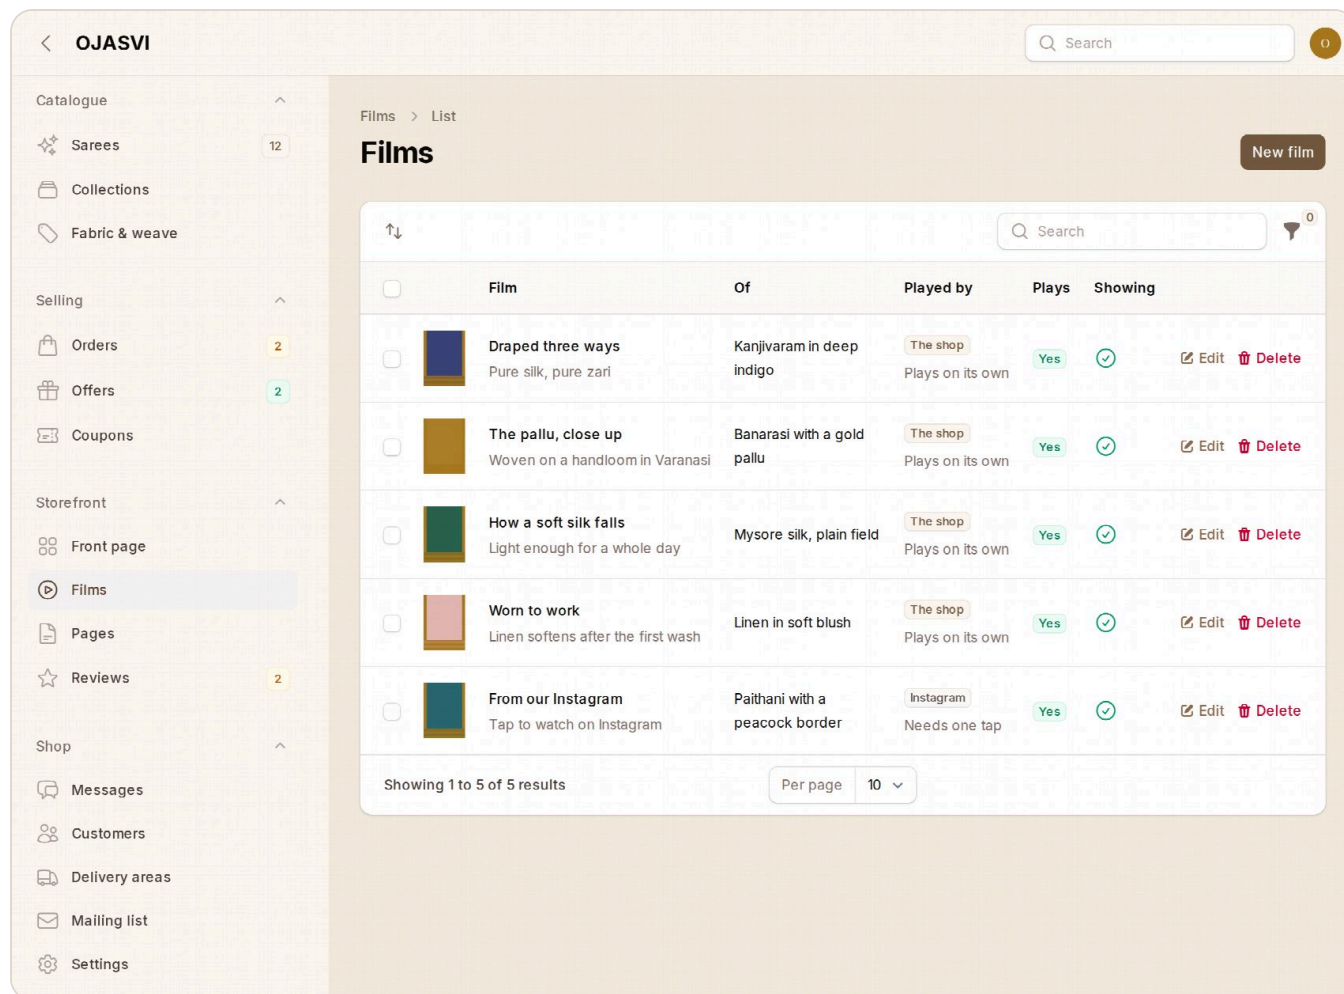

The written pages of the shop. The ones marked fixed are linked from the footer and the checkout — their addresses cannot be changed, but everything on them can.

Field	What it does
Heading	The title at the top of the page.
Its address	ojasvidrapes.in/page/ this .
The line under the heading	Also what a search result shows underneath.
The page	The writing itself.
Published / Link to it in the footer / Order	Whether it is live, whether it appears under Help in the footer, and in what order.

Keep the policies honest and specific — returns, exchanges, how long a refund takes. It is the page a hesitant shopper reads before buying a ₹20,000 saree.

17 · Films

Storefront → Films

Short videos of a saree being worn. They play without sound as a shopper scrolls to them.

- Fifteen to thirty seconds, held upright, is the right shape.
- Export as MP4. A film straight off an iPhone is often in a format most browsers cannot play; the admin checks and tells you before it is accepted.
- A film can belong to a saree, show on the front page, or both.
- An Instagram reel can be used instead of uploading: paste its address.

Leave empty to use the OJASVI logo the site ships with.

The name, the telephone, the WhatsApp number, the postal address, the logo — and who else is emailed when an order comes in.

Everything here appears somewhere a customer can see it: in the footer, on the contact page, in the emails the shop sends. Also tell these people about new orders takes a list of email addresses separated by commas; everybody with an admin account is told anyway.

Delivery & payment

The screenshot shows the 'Shop settings' page for 'OJASVI'. The left sidebar contains a navigation menu with categories like Catalogue, Selling, Storefront, and Shop. The 'Delivery & payment' tab is selected. The main content area is divided into sections: 'What delivery costs' (with input fields for free delivery at ₹ 2999 and other costs at ₹ 99), 'Posted within' (2 working days), 'How people may pay' (switches for Card, UPI, net banking and Cash on delivery), and 'Extra charged for cash on delivery' (₹ 49). There are also sections for 'Charging differently by area?' and 'And not offered above a bag of'.

What delivery costs
These two figures are quoted all over the shop, so they have to be the ones checkout actually charges. Change them here and every page follows.

Free delivery once the bag reaches
₹ 2999
Set it to 0 to give free delivery on everything.

Otherwise delivery costs
₹ 99

Posted within
2 working days

Charging differently by area?
Delivery areas sets a rate and a free-delivery figure per group of pincodes, and those win over the two above.
Shop → Delivery areas.

How people may pay
Turn either off and it stops being offered at checkout at once. With both off, nothing can be ordered — which is the honest way to close the shop for a week.

☒ Card, UPI and net banking
Needs the Razorpay keys in .env. Without them this stays off however it is set here.

☒ Cash on delivery
Can also be refused for particular pincodes under Delivery areas.

Extra charged for cash on delivery
₹ 49
Shown to the shopper before they place the order, never added afterwards.

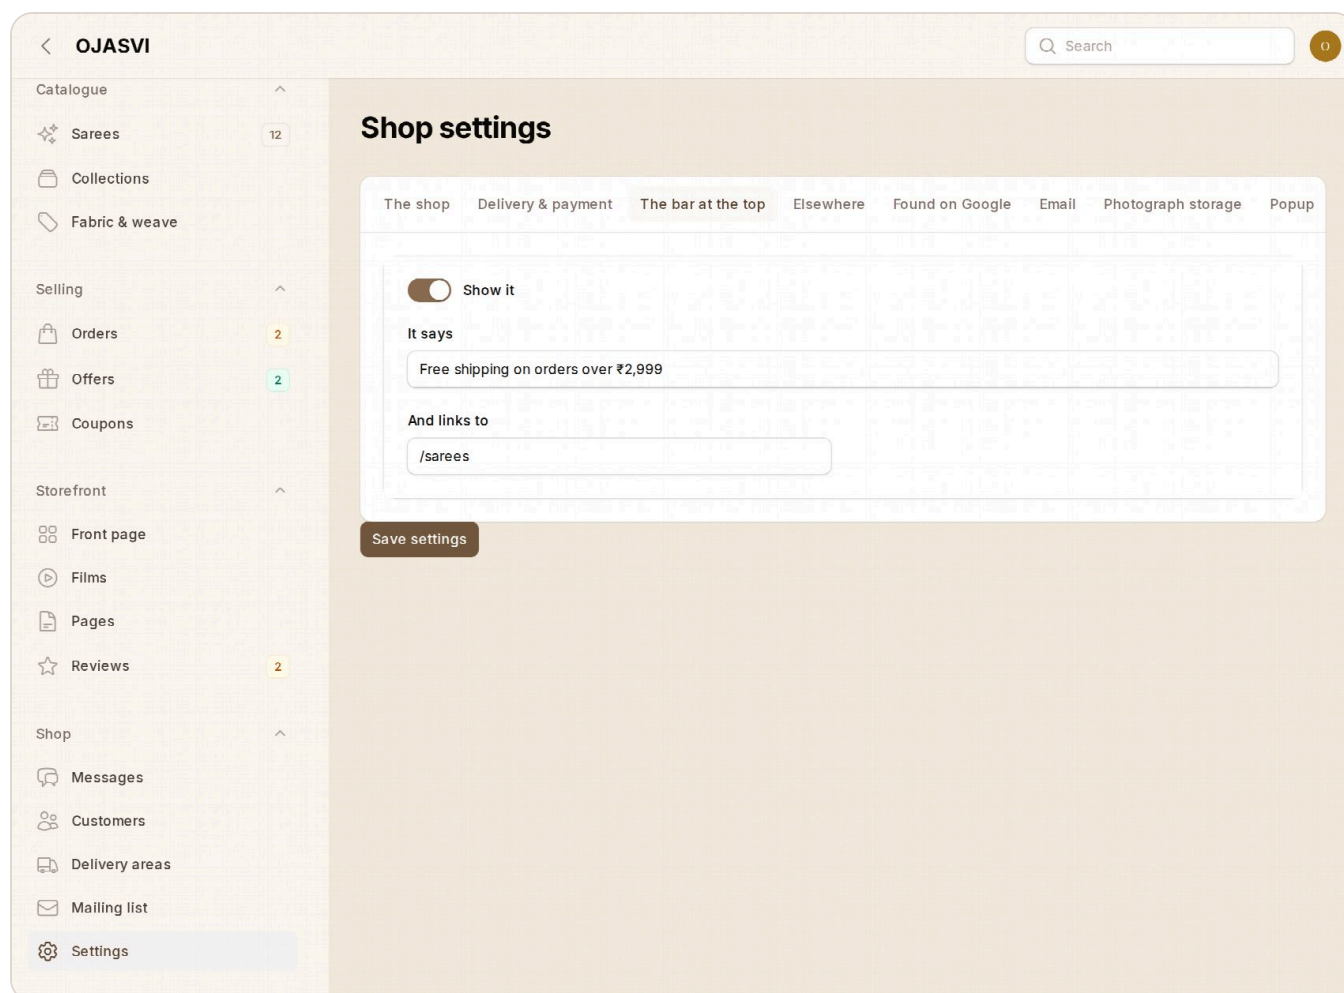

And not offered above a bag of
₹ No limit
A bridal silk sent out on trust is a large loss when it is refused at the door.

The free-delivery figure, the flat charge, how long you take to post, and the two switches for how people may pay.

The free-delivery figure is quoted all over the shop — on the bar at the top, on every saree page, in the bag — and it is the figure checkout actually charges by. Change it here and it changes everywhere at once.

Cash on delivery can carry an extra charge, and can be refused above a certain bag value. A ₹30,000 saree sent COD is a real risk; the ceiling is there for that.

The bar at the top

The thin line above the menu. Turn it off, or use it for one sentence — free delivery, a sale, the last posting date before a festival.

Elsewhere, and the popup

Elsewhere holds the Instagram, Facebook and YouTube addresses for the footer. Popup is the message that appears over the front of the shop — a sale, a new weave, the mailing list. Used well it works; used for nothing in particular it is the thing people close without reading. It stays shut for a month once somebody has closed it.

The tabs not described here

Email, Photograph storage, Analytics and Found on Google are set up and looked after by me. Changing them can stop the shop sending email or showing photographs. If something needs changing there, message me.

19 · A morning routine

Ten minutes, in this order.

- 1 Open the front page of the admin. Look at To pack. If it is not zero, that is the morning's first job.
- 2 Pack and send. Open each order, read the Pieces panel — the shade as well as the saree — pack it, and press Mark as sent with the courier's number when it goes. The customer is told automatically.
- 3 Check On its way. Anything that has been with the courier for longer than it should have been: open it, press Message them, and tell the customer before they ask.
- 4 Reviews and Messages. Both show a number in the sidebar when something is waiting. Approve the reviews; answer the messages.
- 5 Running low. The tile on the front page. Order more, or set the saree to draft before somebody buys what you cannot send.

When a new saree arrives in the shop

- 1 Photograph it: the full drape, the pallu, the border, the weave up close, and one of it worn.
- 2 Sarees → New saree. Fill in The piece, leave the status on Draft.
- 3 Add the photographs; add the shades if it is woven in more than one colour.
- 4 Set the price and the stock.
- 5 Press Create, then open the shop and look at the page as a customer would.
- 6 Happy with it? Change the status to Published and press Save. Feature it if it deserves the front page.

Always look at the shop afterwards

The admin shows you fields; the shop shows you what you have made. Open ojasvidrapes.in in another tab and look at the saree's page — on your phone as well as the computer — before you call it done.

20 • Questions people ask

I added a saree and I cannot find it on the shop

Three things to check, in this order: is the status Published; is Publish at empty or in the past; and does it have at least one photograph. A draft is invisible by design.

The photograph I uploaded is not showing

Open the saree again and look at the Photographs tab. If the box is there but the picture is grey, the upload did not finish — add it again. If it uploaded and still does not show on the shop, message me.

A customer says they paid, but the order says waiting to be paid

Open the order and read the Money panel: it shows what the payment company told us. If it says unpaid and the customer has a receipt from their bank, send me the order number — the payment may have been taken and not reported back.

Can I change the price of one shade only?

Yes. Colourways → the shade → Price, if different. Leave it empty and the shade costs whatever the design costs.

How do I take a saree off the shop without losing its history?

Set the status to Archived. It disappears from the shop; old orders keep working and nothing is lost. Delete only something added by mistake.

A shopper wants to cancel

Open the order, press Call it off, and write why. The pieces go back into stock. If they had paid, press Refund as well — the two are separate on purpose.

The customer's address is wrong

Do not edit it. Either tell the courier the correct address, or call the order off and take it again. The address on an order is the record of what was agreed.

Someone left an unfair review

Leave Show on the shop off. It stays in the admin as a record but never appears.

Can two of us work in the admin at once?

Yes. Each person should have their own account — the order history records who moved what. Ask me to make one.

Something looks broken

Take a screenshot, note what you had just pressed, and send both to me. The screenshot is worth more than a description; the thing you pressed just before is usually the answer.

Pranay Reddy

I look after the server, the email, the payments, the photograph storage and the analytics. Anything in this book is yours to change whenever you like; anything not in it, send me a message and I will take care of it.
